It came to my possession after someone who couldn't take care of them handed it to me so I can find a home for it. You will need your own tank and set up that provide them with clean sand, feeder bowls, hiding and climbing places, etc.

In your reply, provide some information about the set up and level of care you are willing to give the crab. I will not give this out to anyone who just thinks it's cool to have one and has no idea about the basic care requirements. I need some evidence that you have researched the basics for its care.

1st photo is representational. The actual photo of the crab you'll get is the one with the plain shell (not painted).
