

ARE YOU MISSING A PET

hide this posting

unhide

Location Indiana
<https://www.genclassifieds.com/x-759862-z>

QR Code Link to This Post Be aware that if you own a smaller indoor pet that you let outside unsupervised, they can AND DO become food for hawks (and coyotes/foxes) in Indiana. The population of raptors in Indiana is increasing and so too, the threat to beloved pets.

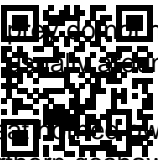

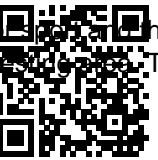

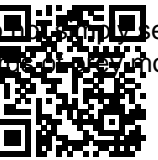

PETS AT RISK FROM RAPTORS

The pets most at risk from hungry birds of prey are small animals that spend time outdoors unsupervised. While bird attacks on pets are not common, birds have been recorded as attacking:

Small dogs and puppies, especially toy breeds
 Small cats and kittens
 Rabbits
 Guinea pigs
 Pet ducks or chickens

Any small pet, however, can be at risk from a bird attack. Large raptors will routinely attack animals that weigh up to 20 pounds as part of a hunt. Many birds of prey will attack even larger animals, even humans, if the bird feels its nest or young is threatened.

RAPTORS THAT HUNT PETS

 birds of prey do hunt for food. They do not seek to harm their animals for fun or game. When a raptor attacks, it is either looking for food or protecting its territory, family and a nest site. The birds are most likely attacking pets. ~1/4 Green herons ~1/4 Northern goshawks ~1/4 Red-tailed hawks (see picture(s) above) https://www.genclassifieds.com/x-759862-z ARE YOU MISSING A PET hide this posting unhide	 NOTE https://www.genclassifieds.com/x-759862-z ARE YOU MISSING A PET hide this posting unhide	 https://www.genclassifieds.com/x-759862-z ARE YOU MISSING A PET hide this posting unhide	 https://www.genclassifieds.com/x-759862-z ARE YOU MISSING A PET hide this posting unhide	 https://www.genclassifieds.com/x-759862-z ARE YOU MISSING A PET hide this posting unhide	 https://www.genclassifieds.com/x-759862-z ARE YOU MISSING A PET hide this posting unhide	 https://www.genclassifieds.com/x-759862-z ARE YOU MISSING A PET hide this posting unhide	 https://www.genclassifieds.com/x-759862-z ARE YOU MISSING A PET hide this posting unhide	 https://www.genclassifieds.com/x-759862-z ARE YOU MISSING A PET hide this posting unhide	 https://www.genclassifieds.com/x-759862-z ARE YOU MISSING A PET hide this posting unhide
--	---	---	---	--	---	---	---	---	---

birds of prey do hunt for food. They do not seek to harm their animals for fun or game. When a raptor attacks, it is either looking for food or protecting its territory, family and a nest site. The birds are most likely attacking pets.

~1/4 Green herons
 ~1/4 Northern goshawks
 ~1/4 Red-tailed hawks (see picture(s) above)

NOTE

Just last week 9/17/17, here in Indianapolis, a large red-tail hawk was sitting on my board fence patiently eyeing my little 4 lb puppy in the back yard. When I opened the back door to let her in, it startled the hawk and it flew away. I was really shocked at the sheer size of the bird. The wingspan was about 3 to 4 feet across!

Smaller backyard hawks, such as the Cooper's hawk and sharp-shinned hawk, will not usually attack a pet unless they are exceptionally desperate. These hawks typically hunt much smaller game, such as mice or small songbirds. Nevertheless, any hawk, owl or falcon may attack a pet under the right - or wrong - circumstances.

If your pet is a bit larger than a toy breed, think too of coyotes and foxes. They can gang-up on unsupervised pets quickly without being seen nor heard and your pet will go missing.

PROTECT AND SUPERVISE your indoor pet(s) that are.