

Never List Animals on Craigslist!

People use Craigslist and Facebook for just about anything nowadays, even giving away pets. Don't do this! The logic I would often hear? "I would rather put my pet in a home than in a shelter." Shelters get a bad name, but there are tons out there doing their damn hardest to find every animal a home.

Dog fighters scour Craigslist and Facebook all day looking for pets they can use as bait. Look at the photos below; these two animals were given away online.

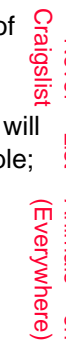

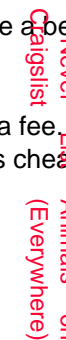

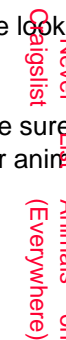

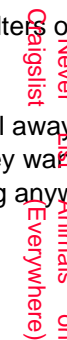

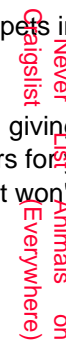

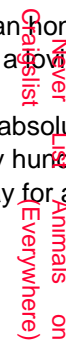

Dog fighters and animal abusers will dress nicely, show up to meet your pet, act courteously, promise to love the animal, and lie the entire time. Once they have the animal you listed online, it's highly likely that the animal will wind up like the two poor souls above. This is how dog fighters train their animals to fight and kill. Craigslist is a gold mine to animal abusers and dog fighters: it is the cheapest and easiest way to

Most breeders require experience, home checks, and additional fees. Corgi figures such animal adoption is key to get around all these requirements.

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5f605t7e60s Craig Ne Take an honest look at life in animal shelters or those who have a better chance of finding a loving home?

If you absolutely insist on giving your animal away online, make sure you require a fee. Dog fighters will not pay hundreds of dollars for your pet. They want to train their animals to fight as cheaply as possible; why pay for an animal that won't survive long anyway?

---

Keep your pets safe. Never list online; instead, contact shelters and rescue groups, family members and friends. Don't be an.