I have two of the most wonderful dogs in the world, but in a heartbreaking turn of events, I will be unable to provide them with a home any longer. Is there anyone out there who is possibly in the market for two dogs? Here is more information on them:

Marley is 6 years old, ~45 lbs. He is a beagle-shepherd mix. He is calm, gentle, compassionate, and very sweet. I think he's a hippie because he seems to just want peace and to love everybody. He's also an adventurer who loves going new places and exploring.

Penny Lane is 5 years old, ~45 lbs. She is a pug-chow-lab mix. She's an incredible goofball and will provide hours of entertainment with her antics. She is a great big ball of love. She loves people, especially kids, and she especially, especially loves babies. I think nanny is her true calling in life.

They are both great with people and kids, both great snugglers, and both excellent hiking companions. Photos attached. Marley has the white face and Penny has the black face.

I would really like to find them a good home together; they've been together since Penny was a baby, so separating them at this point would just break my heart. Let me know if you have any more questions.!
