Observe your properties and operations from any location with internet access. Remote internet viewing and playback gives you the ability to be in two places at once. Archived digital video, stored on the camera, computer hard drive or network attached storage device (NAS) can be used to document worker productivity, honesty, and attitude.

Catch thieves as it is being committed. Provide evidence for break-ins, vandalism, confront false workers compensation claims and/or lawsuits. We can also set up the video camera monitoring service for a monthly fee if you desire.

We install a cost-effective computer-based system, ensuring maximum surveillance capabilities with a wide choice of cameras, both visible and covert. All of our cameras are able to pan, tilt and zoom on live views and recorded video clips. They also will record synchronized audio with no limit to the number of cameras on the system.

Question and answer Q: What advice do you have for a customer looking to hire a provider like you? A: There are many options available for video surveillance. The standard analog camera and DVR system will work for many applications, but does not provide the highest resolution video images necessary for facial recognition or detail such as licence plate recognition. This is a lower cost solution, but may not provide the coverage you need.

The Mobotix 5 Megapixel IP cameras will provide a much clearer, high definition image while also giving you a lot more flexibility in viewing and event notification. Described as a "decentralized" system, the cameras are able to record to a micro SD card installed within the camera itself. There is no need for a Digital Video Recording Device (DVR). With an IP system you have the option to use an unlimited number of cameras to record massive amounts of video to Network Attached Storage devices located on your local network.

As a full service installer, we try to provide the most cost effective solution that will meet your surveillance needs. Q: If you were a customer, what do you wish you knew about your trade? Any inside secrets to share? A: Surveillance camera technology has changed dramatically in the past few years. There are many new features that have been added to IP cameras. The quality of the resolution along with the additional features and capabilities that have been integrated into the newer IP cameras are well worth the extra money if you want your investment to pay off. With video surveillance cameras, you definitely get what you pay for! Q: What questions should a consumer ask to hire the right service professional? A: When searching for surveillance camera equipment and installation, be sure to ask if the company is trained and certified to install the products they are using. The Mobotix IP camera equipment requires a highly trained and knowledgeable installer to set up the cameras properly in every location, for maximum performance.
