Whether you want to learn the basics of music, prepare to audition for your school musical, NYSSMA or college and conservatory, or whether you just want to have fun finding your voice so you can hit those high notes in the shower, I would love to teach you.

I'm a classically trained soprano with an undergraduate degree from Brown University and undergraduate and master's degrees from the Manhattan School of Music. I've been teaching privately for eight years. I've sung leading roles with the Caramoor Music Festival, Glimmerglass Opera and the Aspen Music Festival. I currently am a soloist with the Irvington Presbyterian Church.

My classical background gives me a sound grounding in vocal technique, but I love and teach music of all styles. My students include professional opera, rock and Broadway-style singers, kids, teenagers, and adults taking voice for the love of singing, the fun of the challenge and so they can sound great on karaoke night.

I'm patient, kind and love to teach. Whatever your interests and goals, I would love to help you reach.
