Actually, it doesn't take a ton of computer knowledge, but the entrepreneurial spirit and a little bit of business sense really help!

Let's cut right to it: you're here checking out the gigs section because you need a little extra cash. Maybe it's a one time or part time boost or maybe you need a steady flow. But, there's a reason you're here looking at this ad.

I'm going to give you an opportunity... totally free. No risk. Promise! From there, it's really up to you to take it or not, though there really is truth to the saying "nothing ventured, nothing gained."

Last March... TEN months ago... I tried my hand in the internet marketing world. I stumbled a little bit, but found what worked. It didn't bring me instant riches... but, here's the thing: I got busy in life and walked away from doing anything with it, yet it never stopped for me. For TEN months, anywhere from $50-400 has been magically delivered by cash fairies into my bank account every Wednesday.

Not a ton of money, no, but if you've got business sense, you're picking up on two things: 1. I have done NOTHING for this money in almost TEN months, yet it continues to flow completely on it's own, and 2. if I had repeated those same steps that worked, adding two... five... ten... twenty... more campaigns, that $50-400 I still get weekly for NOTHING would be multiplied. Do the math... what's 10 or 20 times $50-400? Enough to replace a day job, right? And if you can keep going, why stop at 20?

If you're a business major, these are the principles of "passive income" (or "residual income") and "scalability." The idea of scalability here is taking something that works to draw an income stream and repeating those steps to increase the scale of what you're doing, widening the cash flow.
