The Depravity Standard online research is the latest in a landmark research study to use public surveys to define evil in crime for future criminal sentencing and early release decisions. Please log on to participate today, at www.depravitystandard.org.

Your voice counts -- because it is through the data from these surveys of the general public that we will establish a consensus of what qualities of a crime are the worst of the worst. Want to make the justice system, and sentencing, more fair? Log on today and get involved!

The Depravity Standard's focus on evidence of different aspects of a crime's intent, actions, victimology and a perpetrator's attitude promote guidelines that are racially, socially and culturally blind; and easy for judges, jurors, and other justice officials to apply.

We need your input to help establish what makes a crime depraved! The Depravity Standard is the first forensic science or justice project ever developed in which society (and future jurors, victims, and defendants) collectively shapes future criminal sentencing. Please participate! And please visit: <https://depravitystandard.org/>
