Hey there folks,

I'm an indie pop/rock singer, songwriter and guitarist and I recently moved to Boston from Ithaca, NY to play music more seriously. My songs are typically anthemic bittersweet tales of personal moments -- very fun, danceable, but also tug on your heart strings just a little. They're often inspired by 60's tunes, Motown grooves, etc., and now I'm definitely looking to go more in the oldies direction with it -- kind of the style of what Lake Street Dive, Alabama Shakes, and St. Paul & The Broken Bones are doing these days.

Since I transplanted myself here in Boston, I need a new band. So far, we have myself (singing), a drummer, and a bass player. We're now looking for:

� A guitarist with great rhythm that can also write/play beautiful, melodic lead parts that don't distract but only add to the song's feel. (Great if you can sing, too!)

� A keyboard player that can give us swelling overtones of just the right amount of organ, piano & synth sounds. Also would be a huge plus if you can sing harmonies with me.
