Hey there folks,

I'm an indie pop/rock singer, songwriter and guitarist and I recently moved to Boston from Ithaca, NY to play music more seriously. My songs are typically anthemic bittersweet tales of personal moments -- very fun, danceable, but also tug on your heart strings just a little. They're often inspired by 60's tunes, Motown grooves, etc., and now I'm definitely looking to go more in the oldies direction with it -- kind of the style of what Lake Street Dive, Alabama Shakes, and St. Paul & The Broken Bones are doing these days.

Check me out here:

Since I transplanted myself here in Boston, I need a new band. So far, we have myself (singing), a drummer, and a bass player. We're now looking for:

• A guitarist with great rhythm that can also write/play beautiful, melodic lead parts that don't distract but only add to the song's feel. (Great if you can sing, too!)

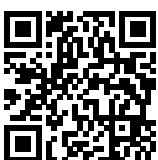

• A keyboard player that can give us swelling overtones of just the right amount of organ, piano & synth sounds. Also would be a huge plus if you can sing harmonies with me.

Eventually we may look for a horn section -- probably trumpet, saxophone, trombone and/or tuba. Right now, we're looking for just guitar and keys. If you're a solid founder, you'll want to be a regular and stick around ASAP!

Importantly, a band should be fun to be in. We're looking for a band of people as diverse as possible to do some 3 or 4 part harmonies if possible. So if you play any of these instruments and also think you have some singing chops and aren't the shoo-in, shoot me an email and we'll talk!

We're in our 20s, we're pretty dedicated to the band, we don't have drug/drinking problems, we aren't racist/sexist/homophobic, and I hope that you're in the same kind of prson in these respects.

Send me an email so we can get this band together! Looking forward to hearing from you all.
