I am looking for a new and better home for my 5-6 year old male cat. Because of 'life happens' situation he is now living with another cat who endlessly torments and harasses him.

He is a complete lap cap/love bug however he is shy and it will take some time to warm up to someone new. He isn't overly fond of playing and would rather be around his person and get attention. He enjoys sitting on the back of a chair while I'm at the PC and likes to be in laps while watching TV. He doesn't like to be picked up but will tolerate it once he trusts you.

No litter box issues, eating a combination of wet and dry food. He is neutered and microchipped, the rehoming fee will go to changing over to the new owner information. He is not UTD on shots as he has been 100% an indoor cat, he does LOVE to lay in a window with it open and lay against the screen when the weather permits it.

He is fine with dogs as long as they don't go after him as he is currently living with two labs, he is also fine with other cats as long as they are a bit older and don't go after him - he is currently living with 2 cats, one his age that could care less about him, the other is younger and this is the tormentor.

Please respond with what his home life will be like, I am more interested in finding him the RIGHT home verse whomever responds first. In your email please include your Vet info.
