 After weeks of GMAT studying do you see yourself in a situation where you can do most math questions, but you can't accurately complete them in two minutes or less? If you are in this spot, I know I can help. The very first thing to understand is your timing issues are not caused by not knowing 'tricks.' Rather, it comes from not having a whole understanding of each and every subject.

As your own personal instructor, I will ensure that when we meet we cover every topic in complete detail.
This is important as you should have a methodical way of solving all types of problems on the GMAT. Thus, when you get a question during the test it will not matter what question you get or from what topic; you'll often be able to attack the question with efficiency and confidence.

To achieve this, we'll start with creating a step by step plan of action designed around your weaknesses. Then we are going to spend each session to understanding a certain topic. To ensure that section is completely understood I'll assign you problems from my original GMAT book.
Every few weeks, I will also assign practice exams to ensure that we can monitor your progress and ensure that you are moving toward a successful exam. Please follow up with me today to discuss this.
