I have a '62 Chevy C-10 for sale. It is a good project. It was the last year for the torsion bar independent front suspension (like the new trucks have). It also has trailing arms with coil springs in the back. The engine is a 235 straight six. It was rebuilt by the previous owner who had it bored .030 over and the crankshaft machined. I tore down the engine, replaced all the seals and bearings, and reassembled it. The transmission is a Saginaw 3 speed out of a late '60s Chevy car. I installed a front disk brake conversion, new rear suspension bushings, rebuilt the rear brake cylinders, replaced the front fenders, and installed a Ron Francis wiring harness. I have everything for it except new brake lines, side windows, rear window, and bed floor. It has been in New Mexico all it's life. I have a clean title in my name. It needs a lot of work to be nice, but not too muck to be a.
