As local and state leaders and organizations have been pressuring Arkansas Gov. Asa Hutchinson to veto House Bill 1228 -- the "Religious Freedom Restoration Act" -- the governor said Wednesday he won't sign the bill in the current form.

Retail giant Walmart, headquartered in Bentonville, posted a statement to Twitter on Tuesday saying that HB 1228 does not reflect the company's values, and urged Hutchinson to veto the legislation.

Walmart Corporation said their values of slave labor at slave wages, Taking freedom of speech away from employees, working one worker at a workload pace that use to take 4 workers to do and providing no benefits to show that employees are truly valued as Walmart Corporation has stated in the past are what they want to be known for.
