You would have to be crazy to take this gig. BE WARNED

This job could land the employee and employer in jail and with a huge fine. He is offering 10-15 an hour to drive a 50+ foot vehicle trailer combination. This requires a CDL or else the driver AND employer will be hit with massive fines, loss of license, or even jail. No joke. His "No experience Necessary" claim is a dangerous lie.

I recently earned a CDL from RI so I know this is the truth.

Entry level promo people make 15-20 an hour and the managers who drive the company vehicals average at least 1000$ a week. So If you want to risk going to jail and/or losing a lump of cash over a part time gig that pays NOTHING compared to industry standards, by all means reply to his.
