I am a national corporate art installer with great search engine placement for my website. I get frequent calls for home installs but they are not profitable enough for me to come from Wisconsin to do. I routinely get inquiries from people needing help with their art installation and I need a partner to take care of these with me.

This can be a lucrative side job. I will give you the person's contact info, you hang their art, then send me a small finder's fee. Then I'll send you another name, and so it continues.

If you've got a good eye for design, I'm hoping you can help. Artists photographers and interior designers who understand layout and know what "eye-level" are encouraged to apply. Standard hook and wire (using 2 hooks) is most common, followed by d-rings and sawtooth attachments. Sometimes we use a z-bar or 3 pt security.

We don't want the client's walls looking like a dartboard, so you should be able to understand how to "nail" these challenges on the first try.

Does this make sense to you? If so, I want to hear from you . . . especially if you have liability!
