I am posting this ad for assistance. I am a secondary English teacher at a small private school in Northeastern Pennsylvania. I have been teaching English for 30 years. For the past 5 years I have entertained an idea for a book. The idea actually originated when I was teaching my English class formal letter writing in 2009. One of my students asked if he could pen his letter to his grandma who had recently passed away. He explained that he had so much more to tell his grandma. I knew exactly what this young man was feeling. We all could identify with him. My student ended his letter with "Forever Yours". I have decided that now is the time to launch my project which I am tentatively entitling Forever Yours. What would you say if you had the opportunity to write a letter to a deceased person--whether that person was a friend or foe, companion or competitor, acquaintance or relative? Just like my young student, we have all wished we could express one more thought. Imagine the stories that would unfold or the memories that would be kindled? My aim is to compile such letters for publication. I am seeking willing participants across our country to prepare and share their letters with us. My goal is to reach all ages, races, ethnicity and religions. I have been so overwhelmed by the beautiful letters I have received so far. I am hoping you can help spread my request for letter writers. I am looking for my friends and family to help me. I have been reaching out to colleges, universities, churches, support groups and people including my own address. I am looking for P.O. addresses so that I can reach people that I can't reach. I am looking for more detailed information. Forever Yours/PO Box 456/Dunmore, PA 18512
