2005 Vespa Granturismo MS200

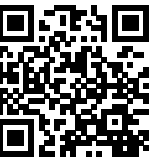

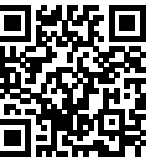

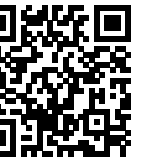

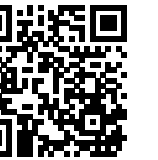

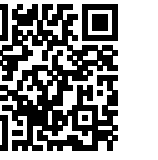

It's getting too heavy for my dad. Hard for him to handle and lift the kickstand. For his safety, we rather he stop riding this scooter. It has a clean title.

Weighing in at 300 pounds dry, with a length of 76 inches and a width of almost 30 inches, this scooter is the perfect choice for all occasions. It easily reaches speeds of 65 mph and gets a respectable 65 miles per gallon, combined. As with most scooters, it gets better mileage at lower speeds.

The 2005 Granturismo's instrumentation includes a digital clock, fuel gauge, warning light, and temperature gauge. Unlike most Vespas, the Granturismo is liquid-cooled, so you'll occasionally have to check that liquid. There is a decent-sized dash storage box, a rear rack, and a shopping hook below the dash, so there should always be enough room for your books or shopping trips. The driver has the usual flat floorboard footing, while the passenger has nicely integrated pop-out footrests.
