Hola. Still single or going to events with no luck?

----No shame in it. Wanting someone is human nature; men and women weren't put on Earth to sit in cubicles all day. The problems come when people get involved for the wrong reasons like status, desperation, just sex, or money.

----Checking out the right places? Most people don't go to clubs and parties to find a significant other, so check out more simple laid back places. And if your friends don't like your guy/girl, who cares? You're dating him/her, not them.

----Be realistic. Relationships won't be easy or fun all the time. Plus, we all have issues and make mistakes (especially those World Cup refs). Every guy knows the cardinal rule to getting women is "tell her what she wants to hear"...he may seem all fun at first but that does change lol.

----Human Nature. Society is pushing too far away from our nature, and it's ruining gender relations. There's a reason more "traditional" nations have lower divorce and happier relationships, whereas nations like ours have high divorce and unhappier relationships. Men used to be MEN, and they liked WOMEN. Women used to be WOMEN, and they liked MEN. Families came first. Men and women completed each other instead of competed. It all worked great until Feminism came and ruined it all; being a mom is a lot more empowering than being a corporate slave helping someone else get richer until you get laid off; life used to be about fun and family until people became too blinded by work, luxuries, money and competing.

----Masculinity. Criticizing men for being stubborn, dirty minded or egotistical at times is like criticizing a dog for barking. It's our nature, accept and laugh at it.

----No games. "Hard to get" is popular but its the worst thing you can do (there's a difference between Courting and Chasing). Only desperate men chase; real men don't have time for games, especially since there's a billion other girls out there. Men should be strong minded; don't confuse being whiny and serious for being "strong minded"

--Sex. Sexuality is the most important feature thing. Live without him and the women would look at each other. It's nothing to be closed minded about. People will think, snore, and read racism. But sex is the thing that can't you enjoy. It's more fun to have a partner in the house. It's wild and crazy. I'll tell them for the first time tell my friends over and over?

----- Finally, forget the media; there's a reason most celebrities and hot couples don't last in their relationships (the media's job is to dumb, divide, distract, deceive people and put people in fear). Of course attraction is important but the more you get to know someone, the more attractive they become. Life is about Quality, not Quantity.
