I have two lab/husky puppies that need a new home. They are 5months old with their first set of shot. Due to life changes can no longer provide for them. To make sure they are going to good home. The rehoming fee is $50 a piece.

A little about the breed

The Labrador Husky is a spitz type of dog that was bred for work as a very strong, fast sled dog; it is a purebred originating from Canada. Although the breed's name may be baffling, it is not a mix between a Labrador Retriever and a Husky. The breed is very little known, and there are no breed clubs that currently recognize it.

About their temperament

The Labrador Husky may have a somewhat different temperament from other Northern breeds. The breed can be friendly and not aggressive with strangers and is well behaved if socialized properly. These dogs often do well with children, especially if reared with them. Being with other dogs always makes them happy, because they are bred to work well in a pack. Training is easy and fun because they are an intelligent breed.

Unlike the Siberian or Alaskan Husky, the Labrador Husky is not well known. The breed has many wolf-like characteristics owing to its ancestry; however, the Labrador Husky has been a loyal and trusted companion. The Labrador Husky is for certain a highly trainable breed and tend to be very intelligent. The Labrador Husky is a combination of a very intelligent and stamina breeds that are good for virtually any work. The breed was fast and the Siberian or Alaskan Husky's cousins, so they have a very strong and endurance.
