My spoiled, 9 pound female had four puppies. They are 7 weeks old as of Monday April 20th. The father is my 10 pound salt&pepper/ tuxedo male. His parents (my sister's) had papers but this litter was a surprise. Papers have been lost for years. I am not bothering tracking down pedigree, hence the forever homing fee is half what it would be. They've been vetchecked twice since birth and will receive their first shots and wormer, I have documentation. We have 3 females. One male.

First - Precious (female)

. She is estimated to be 5-to 7 pounds full grown. They have all had tails docked and dewclaws removed. female has is currently black, silky, thick and has a soft wave. (takes after her Aunt on dad's side which is my mom's dog). She has a tiny bit of white inbetween the pads of all four paws. The fur at the tip of her muzzle has faded already since birth. Her mother was born black but faded to what's known as silver. So if you are set on a true black, this pup is NOT for you. She may stay black (Her aunt is jet black silky soft wave with white tuxedo) BUT she will likely fade to a blue/ silver like her mother and her aunt from her mom's side, (also my dog). All colors of poodles do what is called "clearing" or "fading" of their color. They normally reach the final color by age 2. All dogs I mentioned can be seen in person with appointment. Maybe not all at once, but we are all local. Choctaw/ Newalla area. I have plenty pictures as well. Mom is 2 yrs old, Dad 27 months. I will be discriminate about their new home. They are all loved and perfect. Precious is a calmer pup, likes to be a lap dog and hide her head. She has a healthy appetite, sweet disposition but still plays and even learned to chirp out a bark. Already use the puppy pad 6 out of 10 times. She eats, plays likes a little love and then shes ready for her nap again.

Second - Ruby - (Reddish-brown female)
 She is pointy-eared, holding her head high. Her color is currently faded to a light ivory. She has a tiny bit of white inbetween the pads of all four paws. The fur at the tip of her muzzle has faded already since birth. Her mother was born black but faded to what's known as silver. So if you are set on a true black, this pup is NOT for you. She may stay black (Her aunt is jet black silky soft wave with white tuxedo) BUT she will likely fade to a blue/ silver like her mother and her aunt from her mom's side, (also my dog). Third - Pepper - female (black but will likely either stay black and have salt&pepper muzzle or her whole coat may go salt&pepper at about 12-15 weeks like her daddy did) She is outgoing and curious but hides if startled. She is spongy and paws at you or barks at you for attention. Communicates well.

Fourth is Oscar - a male - currently ivory but is fading to white)
 He is a stinker! He's the first at everything. He is VERY friendly and outgoing and VERY curious and determined. He will need consistency in manners and training but will likely be the most dedicated pup of them all.

I can begin crate training, (which I recommend if pup will be left alone). I will hold till Mother's Day with contract agreement, refundable until May 5th should you change your mind. Also, we will be in Okemah area for family functions off and on. We have family there that work state wide. Questions.
