I'll get right down to it :

I've been dying to get both a gaming channel and a comic book/movie/tv YouTube channel off the ground for years now. I can write and film a bit (I'm a former Art Institute student once upon a time) and have been told I should get started on this by friends, family, and co-workers for about as long as well. That's where you come in. I can't do it alone (and frankly why would I?) I'm also looking to make some new friends or possible partners in this venture.

So if you can edit video and sound, create graphics and logo's/thumbnails, draw in PhotoShop, or know anyone that can please feel free to get a hold of me or refer the person you know to me. I'd ideally like someone to help with the editing of videos and creation of custom YouTube thumbnails and video intro's primarily but that could easily expand and your input would not only be appreciated but welcomed.

Do you play video games? I play mostly on the PC so that's where the majority of the content gaming wise will come from. Minecraft, Killing Floor 2, Battlefield, Cities : Skylines are just a few examples of games we'd cover, edit, and upload. I'd like to do reviews, previews, podcasts, editorials, and things like that for both the gaming and comics/movies/tv/pop culture channels (this second channel will mostly focus on comic books and comic book related movies, tv shows, and other related materials).

Are you skilled in these areas or want to be a part of this? Have you thought about being a part of a fun loving YouTube channel and getting views by just spouting off non-sense about your favorite nerdy subjects. You are the scientist that wants to make your parents love you just by being the restless know-it-all that everyone likes and are doing it to do something creative and share with the world. Regardless of if anyone is asking for it? Most of us know! Look forward to hearing from you or seeing your channel. Don't know? I will be quarantined and restless.

ask for some examples of your work and art style and we can go from there. I have rough sketch's and a few PhotoShopped mock ups of what I want the graphics and branding to look like but I can provide.
