The city of Elko is a short drive from the property. Elko has one of the lowest unemployment rates in the country. Elko is a bustling little city, offering a wide variety of services and amenities to visitors. Restaurants range from the homespun to the elegant from The Coffee Mug near the center of the city, say, to Misty's at the Red Lion. You can take Nevada Route 225 north to Wild Horse Reservoir, Mountain City, and Owyhee. Nevada Route 227 leads southwest to Spring Creek, South Fork State Park, Lamoille, and the magnificent Ruby Mountains.

Elko, Nevada has been termed "a small town in splendid isolation." Not long ago, it was named "Best Small Town in America."

Sitting at an elevation of more than 5,000 feet, Elko is known as "Nevada with Altitude," a moniker to which it truly lives up. The thriving northeastern, Nevada city is bordered by the towering, snow-capped Ruby Mountains, often called the Alps of, Nevada, and the lush, glacier-carved Lamoille Canyon. Elko is where, Nevada's real cowboys work and play, and the Wild West spirit is catching. Cowboys from across the nation flock to Elko every January for the National Cowboy Poetry Gathering, a celebration of the cowboy lifestyle and the rural West. But the events in Elko go beyond its Western roots. Every July is the annual National Basque Festival, a nod to the rich Basque history and culture both in, Nevada and across the country. The festival is a raucous family event with traditional food and wine, dancing and even a ceremonial running of the bulls. And for Basque food anytime, Elko's authentic Basque restaurants always hit the spot.
