Some heartless human abandoned Benji to fend for himself. And when you're a little guy there is nothing more terrifying than being alone in the world with no place to go, and have no that loves you.

Benji was brought into our shelter terrified, cold, and all alone. His face tells you just how cruel people can be to a helpless little dog. Benji is one of those dogs people don't want. He's a Chihuahua mix, brown, and common. And because he isn't considered worthy of most people's consideration, he suffers quietly alone in our shelter.

Can you think of anything worse for a little guy like this? Not long ago, Benji had a kennel mate that made him feel so much better, but he got adopted and Benji is once again alone. He is terrified, uncertain, and almost afraid to trust. It's easy to understand when the one person you did trust leaves abandoned you.

Benji wants to be loved so badly it almost hurts. And when someone takes the time to patiently hang out with him he quietly begins to to not feel as scared. Benji needs to be nurtured, and held, and gently loved. And if someone steps forward to offer him that, he will become an absolutely wonderful dog: a dog that will live you more than anyone else ever could. And he will give you that live for the rest of his life.

Don't turn away from him by thinking someone else will adopt him. That's why he is still in out shelter. He needs you to step forward and claim him as your own. And if you do, you will receive a gift you better than you could ever hope for: his undying love and loyalty. If you take him home, you'll wonder how you were able to live without him.

Benji is injured, has a few shots, and is now shipped out to his new home. If you would like to adopt him, please call. I will be happy to help you to get him and to make the transition as smooth as possible. He's worth.
