Child Care Philosophy

Family child care in a "home like" setting is the best alternative there is for working parents. It provides a small secure environment for children during the most important time of their development. Family child care offers a home away from home, providing children with "siblings" of all ages, to play, socialize, and learn from. My goal in providing quality child care for your child is to provide. . .

? A learning environment. . . learning is not necessarily the ABC's and 123's, but is also the learning of values. The learning of honesty, respect, self--reliance, and potential, self-discipline, and moderation, the values of being; dependable, love, sensitivity to others, kindness, friendliness and fairness are the values of giving.

A proper way to discipline a child is to give them choices. Since children are naturally curious about things, it is important that you allow them a similar right. Why so? Well, this kind of choice is not as confusing as you would think because the boundaries are clear and what is expected of them. Most children are given choices which become more inappropriate and why, and what alternative is acceptable. In this way, the child is being managed without making the child feel bad or involved. This helps develop their self-esteem, encourages them to handle difficult situations they solve in the future, teaches my child how to deal with a character who may experience stress and show you some ways to make amends. I give choices, and in extreme situations a child may be given a "time out", because at times a child may be having trouble making choices of their own and they just may need a couple of minutes to calm down, and think about their choices.

And to foster unconditional love. . . this kind of love is very important to me because children should not grow up feeling that in order to be loved and cared for they must meet numerous conditions.

Communication is key to a successful child care arrangement. The parent and provider need to have a good working relationship so they can communicate and work together. Parent and provider need to exchange pertinent information in the child's life such as changes in routine, special events, or activities, as well as changes such as death, divorce, separation, moving, visitors, etc. All this information can be important in understanding the child's feelings, behavior, and well being.
