What does lawn aeration do?

Reduces the amount of weeds Prevents soil compaction

Increases nutrients reaching the roots Increases growth

Improves oxygen circulation at the roots Helps the roots absorb fertilizer

Helps increase activity of friendly organisms such as earthworms

Benefits of Dethatching your lawn

Thatch is a layer of slowly decomposing grass, dead roots, and other yard debris that's picked up by your mower and tossed back onto the grass. Over time, lawns accumulate thatch even if you sweep or use a mulching mower. The accumulation of thatch over time prevents water and other nutrients from getting through to the roots and gives insects a great place to hide.

Are you planting a garden this year?

Whether you're planting a new garden or utilizing an existing garden, rototilling will break through sod and compacted soil to turn it into a fine texture, ready for planting.
