

Slacklining

I'm throwing this out there to see if there are others in the area that are into slacklining. If you don't know what slacklining is, that's ok. If you do know what it is, but you don't know how to get into it, that's ok, too. If you have a slackline sitting in the closet collecting dust because the first time you tried didn't go well, you may have to dig it out. If you are a "slacker", and you are looking for others to join in on the fun, that's great!

My name is Roger, I'm in the Holly Springs area, and I got into slacklining a little over a year ago. It started as something that looked like a fun challenge, and I got hooked pretty quickly. Every time I set up a line at the park, it seems to generate some interest, and the kids love trying to walk the line. Unfortunately, there doesn't seem to be much of a slacking community around here.

If you're interested in joining us for some slacking fun, just reply via email. I'm not trying to organize a community or anything like that. I'm just trying to see if anyone else out there is interested. I've been setting up lines at the Harris Lake County Park on Sundays when I can. I'd like to have more folks join me/us in this great challenge of balance and concentration. (Not to mention it's pretty good exercise!) We have the ability set up lines for beginners as well as those are a little more experienced. The lines we have can be set up from 10' to around 100' long, and anything in between. If you have your own slackline, by all means bring it! We can help out getting familiar with the setup and getting started walking on the line. Just make sure you try to bring some sort of tree protection. (Old towels work great if you don't have tree wraps.)

So, if you are interested, reply via email. If there is interest, I will post when/where we will be setting up, and it will simply be an open invite. In the meantime, I will try my best to set lines up at the Harris Lake County Park on Sundays, and it's always an open invitation if you see me/us out there walking the line. I'm also leading a group of slackliners.
