I'm looking for a metal worker/welder to fashion a 10' curved railing for a set of stone steps. The railing will be installed by stone workers (or we can arrange a coordinated plan of attack so that the railing posts can go in first when the masons are doing their work and the final welding of the rail to the posts done later).

If you have experience with this sort of thing, drop me a line and we can talk about the details. A rough estimate of time and cost would be appreciated. Please see the attached photo to see the railing that is being replaced and to get a general idea of the layout of the steps.
