Selling my 1970 Duster. Not happy about it, but I need a truck.

Details:

- Slant 6 engine that runs like a top (refreshed a few hundred miles ago, receipts available)
- Carburetor is a 2-barrel for a little more kick than the OE single throat. Has new K&N filter
- Manual steering, but these A-bodies are so light it doesn't matter
- Manual brakes (drums at all four corners, rear shoes are new)
- Manual shift. It's 3-speed on the column. No anti-theft devices needed; not a lot of people can drive these anymore. Transmission and clutch are solid as the engine
- New upper A-arms, ball joints, and wheel bearings up front
- No A/C, but the car is ported for it. Only needs a compressor and some other small bits
- Car does have surface rust underneath, but that's all. Everything visible is great
- All electrical equipment is fully functional, save for the driver's side fender light. Has brand new battery
- Points system has been replaced with electronic ignition. Car cranks every time
- Glass is all original and in good shape, except for the crack in the windshield
- Radiator was rodded out not too long ago. System will stay cool at idle all day long
- Interior is excellent. This is a car that even "non-car people" will enjoy riding in. Can't beat those bench seats
- Gauge cluster is functional sans the voltage readout, but standard aftermarket gauges are fitted underneath the dash, voltage included, so you know what's going on. Special dual carb and are easy to swap to what you would have had from a 1968-1969 roadster. It would have had the elevations and it any, it's in the states. It's a daily driver, but sometimes when it's in a pinch, it's a A registered and insured, it's a great find.

This car would be excellent for a lot of things. It's stupid simple to work on from the beginning enthusiast. If you're looking for the authentic 1970 driving experience, it doesn't get any more authentic than this. You could buy it for your grandkid and teach them that you mean it when you say back in my day. The body is rock solid and you could hotrod it pretty quickly if that's your thing. Whatever you do, you'll get looks and thumbs-up anywhere you go guaranteed.

Price is $9000. Cash only please. No PayPal or any of that nonsense. Feel free to email me for any further information or pictures. I work a busy schedule, so email is best for me. If you contact me and express interest I will respond. If the ad is still up, then the car is still for sale.

Like I said above, I'm not happy about it, but I have to sell the toy to get a truck. I will consider trading, but only for an M715 or older generation Power Wagon. Truck absolutely must be a 4x4 and manual shift. No automatics. Obviously I will front cash if trading up in value.

Thanks for looking, and have a great.
