I have frequently worked with students who do well in school but who score well below their potential on standardized exams such as the SAT. This is really trying for both students as well as their parents!

The SAT can very well decide a student's whole career path; a high score makes him or her more competitive for acceptance by more top universities, and graduation from one of these institutions helps ensure a good career plus a more secure future. I'm a specialist with students in this scenario; I was there myself once, and I have taught myself the tools and methods for overcoming the barriers that keep high achievers from attaining the scores they deserve.

I've chosen to be an SAT instructor as my life's work. There's nothing more rewarding than working with a student, getting him or her primed for the SAT exam, and after that seeing a score that is indicative of their actual ability! It is a win/win for every one!

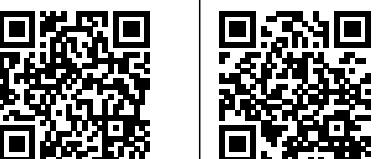

Test prep is a lot more than simply knowledge; it is confidence, self-assuredness, and a "kick-butt" attitude. I am going to be there at every step in your child's advancement from being uncertain and tentative to being excited to nail that test. Students understand they're free to call or text me whenever they have a concern or need a teacher to encourage and motivate them. I am there for them 24/7.

Follow up with me at your convenience to discuss your child's scenario. We can discuss a game plan for getting them prepared, both academically and emotionally, to earn the SAT score they.
