We have 2 male cats who need a good home. They do not need to go together.

The white one is named Sam. He is roughly 3 or 4 years old (he was a shelter cat). I swear he thinks he's a dog. He is very friendly to anyone who scratches his chin and ears. He can be a bit of a bully with other cats but never violent. He just thinks he's the "top dog". Sam is a very quiet cat. He howled the first couple of days we had him and then quit making any kind of noise. When he does meow it is so quiet you can barely hear him. He is declawed on his front paws and up to date on all shots.

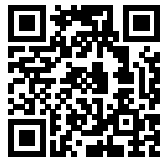

The dark gray one is named Azusa (pronounced uh-ZOO-zuh). He is approximately 3 years old. We have had him since he was 6 weeks. He is very much the typical cat, stand-offish and sometimes a snob. He is not aggressive in the slightest and will not pick fights. He likes to be left on his own and in his own time will seek attention. He is very quiet. No howling at all and only meows when he is ready to be fed. He is declawed on his front paws as well and up to date on all his shots.

Our new house is not pet friendly and our schedules do not allow us to give them the attention and exercise they need. We would ask for a very minimal re-homing fee, simply for the assurance that they will go to good homes and not to be abused. Please send me a message if you are interested.!
