Although many borrowers look at interest rates first when shopping for a new home loan, this may not be the best tactic. In fact, there are several key components that determine the cost of a mortgage and how well it suits your lifestyle. Below are ten questions that will help you determine if a loan is the most appropriate available for you and your family.

Keep in mind that while a loan agent can answer any of these questions verbally, mortgage programs and rates change all the time. So, verbal
