I have a pair of bonded orange dwarf hamsters, one male, one female. They require a 20 gallon tank minimum. I am not against their offspring used as feeders but I would like these two to be kept as pets. Both are orange and almost of breeding age.

The male is the larger of the two.

They coexist with each other very well and have never bitten. Very easy to handle. They are a monogamous pair which means you cannot introduce them to other hamsters and if you separate them they will become depressed. They can produce litters every few weeks and both should be kept together for the entire process.

Text or email if interested. $25 for the pair. No phone.
