Does your child have to count on their fingers when adding or subtracting?

Do they struggle to comprehend what a word problem is asking them to do?

Do they demonstrate difficulty learning and retaining math facts?

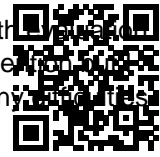

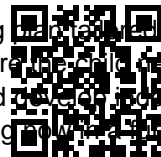

Do they get confused often when independently working on math homework?

Hello, My name is Cindy and I am the owner of Learning Curve Academics. I have worked at a private literacy center as a manager for the last 3 years using the multi-sensory instruction techniques using Lindamood Bell. I have worked with many children, many of them having dyslexia Dyscalculia, or other learning disabilities, and have seen many parents struggling to understand why their child cannot comprehend basic subtraction, or why fractions are so difficult to explain to their child.

Many times students get confused and need one-on-one, hands on, instruction in order to create and maintain a solid foundation of math facts and to understand new concepts. Using a multi-sensory approach helps each child visualize and understand each concept, starting from numeral imagery, to imaging the number line, to carrying and borrowing, multiplication facts, division, decimals, fractions, integers, and more! I work with students from k-12, and can also teach pre-algebra, algebra, geometry and more!

Learning Curve Academics is a multi-sensory approach to teaching math. It uses a variety of techniques, including visual, auditory, kinesthetic, and tactile, to help students understand math concepts. This approach is particularly effective for students with learning disabilities, such as dyslexia or dyscalculia. Learning Curve Academics is a private tutoring center located in Anchorage, Alaska. It provides individualized instruction for students from kindergarten through 12th grade. The center focuses on building a strong foundation in math, with a particular emphasis on multiplication and division. Learning Curve Academics is a non-profit organization that is dedicated to helping students succeed in math. It offers a variety of services, including one-on-one tutoring, small group instruction, and math camps. Learning Curve Academics is a highly rated tutoring center that has helped many students improve their math skills and confidence.
