I provide professional line editing and proofreading services.

Types of Editing:

A book should go through at least three different types of editing, and they should be done by at least three different people. It needs content editing to help you organize your story in the most interesting and understandable way and catch any passages or plot elements that are confusing, redundant or boring. After that it needs line editing to polish the grammar, spelling, punctuation and so forth. And just when it seems like the book must be perfect, it needs proofreading to catch the errors that somehow stayed in there anyway. A good professional standard for proofreading is to keep checking until you have carefully read through the whole book once without finding a single error.

Here are some of the books I have edited or proofread, that you can sample on Amazon:

- Demons of DunDegore by M Joseph Murphy
- A Fallen Hero Rises by M Joseph Murphy
- Beyond the Black Sea by M Joseph Murphy
- Council of Peacocks by M Joseph Murphy
- Shadows of Insanity by David DeShazo

Line Editing Requirements:

The final draft must already be written and the content editing done. Attempts at line editing of earlier drafts will only waste your money and my time, so please be sure the story is ready. You're looking for a free to go to it. I love to work with other writers anyway, and I'm glad to help you figure out what your work is ready for. I can't line edit any piece that's not ready to go. There are no guarantees for a proofread.

Proofreading requirements:

Line editing must be completed, and the work must be new to me. For a quote or to learn more, please fill out one of the contact forms at MaraJeddoreBlakney.com. I look forward to working with.
