Recently, within the last month, I acquired two male rats. They are now 6 months old and in great health. Both are active, intelligent animals. They enjoy playing, exploring, cuddling, and they are chatty. Wonderful and warm animals. They came from a home that was using rats as food for a pet snake, Nova was attempted to be used as food though the snake would not eat him. They came home with me that night. Not exactly ready for rats, I converted a bookshelf into a habitat for them to leave in. It is plenty big enough for them to run around and play in, though they will need an exterior play area as they are highly active, young rats. They are NOT fixed. They will need to be fixed before being caged with a female. They will only find their forever home as a pair. I have a large bag of food, it will last MONTHS. Literally. Their diet has otherwise included only organic food. They have never been around pine or cedar bedding, I have a very good amount of bedding, it should also last you months if you are filling their bedding area (that will be included). They have a potty- they only poop in it, and they are nearly potty trained completely. Romeo is an explorer by nature, very inquisitive and observant. Both respond to their name. Nova is nervous because of his precious experience, but he is also very curious. He will scurry when people approach. He will come to the word "treat", both will.

I considered to keep them, though I am allergic and my dog is very bothered by them. So we fostered to the best of our abilities and now they are ready to go home to someone who understands what rats need and understand their behavior. Because they are so special and intelligent, I will not allow them to go home to just anyone. They need someone who has time and experience! They are very fragile creatures and need someone who understands how to handle them. I will expect you to know these things if you are contacting me about them

What I have:
- Potty with cage attachments
- Large habitat (100% pine)
- Potty with cage attachments
- Package of Bedding
- Large bag of food (Haytee brand)
- Two matching food dishes (small and heavy to avoid tipping)
- Bed area where they sleep and cuddle)
- M fleece pieces to line the bottom of habitat (cost efficient and easy to clean)
- fleece "blanket" (they lovee cuddling with you)

you in it)

They have grown to be accustomed to their habitat and it is healthy to rehome them with it, hence why this price is so low. I will tell you that you are going to get this all for WAY less than I paid for it. It was a very expensive project to collect the things they need. The space they have now is HEALTHY. Anything smaller would NOT be fair. If you're interested, please tell me a little about yourself and how you tend to take care of them...just show me you can provide these baby rats with the lifestyle they deserve. They are too smart and precious to be given less than perfect.

$150 for everything listed OR....

Rehoming Fee $15

Habitat (HAS to go with them) $85

Food $10

Bedding $10

Food dishes $5

Bed area $10

Potty $10

Fleece pieces $5

I want them to go to a good home, so I am willing to discuss the price. IF YOU DO NOT HAVE ANYTHING FOR THEM, THIS IS BY FAR YOUR BEST BET FOR SET UP. Trust me!!!
