Dutch is a very sweet loving boy. He is a Lab/Parsons Terrier Mix & a service dog in training. He knows basic commands and has been learning "Open" for Opening the doors and cabinets for me. He loves his homemade rope toys my daughter and I made for him. Dutch has had all his vaccines, but is scheduled for an update on July 6th. Dutch was born on October 22 2013. He has been Neutered, and he loves to go to Petco and flirt with the ladies there for his Grooming and Bath. They absolutely love him. He even got a little reward for being the best client of the day!

Unfortunately for Dutch he seems to get a little anxiety and scared easily lately when outside or approached from behind. With all his playful behavior and love, he nipped at a young man and bit his hand. Nothing serious and we thought it was an isolated event. he didn't attack and with his training he was doing well. Well, fast forward and while my son was walking Dutch a younger child skateboarded up behind Dutch and he jumped around startled and bit another child. I feel I must reiterate that Dutch did not attack anyone. However, with that being said This happened right in the middle of a PCS when Dutch is supposed to be flying on the plane with me as his handler, there is not enough time (2weeks) to address and make sure with his trainer that we can guarantee he will not be frightened on the plane and possibly bite someone else's child or another adult for that manner. I DO NOT want him to be put to sleep for something that can be addressed.

Dutch will come with his Bed, 1 training leash, 1 walking leash, 1 brush, 1 shedding tool, Travel bowls, Chew ropes, Ropes for cabinets and doors, 2 toothbrushes and toothpaste, dog food, training treats, Doggie wipes, Shampoo spray for waterless shampoo, shampoo, Backpack and Blanket.

Dutch needs a couple or person who will take the time with him and a trainer to address his anxiety. I am very upset and distraught over this so please don't call me with any negativity. Serious inquiries only. Re-Home Fee does apply.
