The Child Language Lab at Boston University is looking for healthy, English-speaking children from ages 19 months to 5 years who have been diagnosed with Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) to participate in research on language and cognitive development.

Our studies take place in a comfortable setting at Boston University's Charles River campus. Parents participate with their children in two play sessions, which usually last about an hour and a half. During this play session, we show the child short video clips and play with them with toys and pictures.

We hope that you will join us in our efforts to find out how children with ASD learn! If you are interested in participating, or in receiving more information, please reply via email to this posting, call us at or visit our website at: www.bu.edu/childlanguage.

This study is a great opportunity to collaborate with innovative researchers at a renowned university. There is a small monetary compensation for participation and free parking is provided. We look forward to hearing from!
