I'm a professional web developer with a full time job, looking for some side work helping out a small business. I'll make a site or update your current site for your business in exchange for cash or a barter.

For specific details if you want to know, I work mostly with php, mysql, and Javascript (usually with jQuery). I've also dealt with MANY other languages and databases, so if you have an existing site you need modified, let me know what language, I probably have worked with it before. I also specialize in creating responsive websites, meaning they're specially designed for computers, tablets, and phones.

I can do 100% custom web applications as opposed to just sticking you with some out-of-the-box content management system. I have over 10 years experience, over 100 clients through the companies I've worked for, and am still active. If it can be done on a website, I can do it. I can even provide site/application references if needed. I can work with you on anything ranging from small things like adding Google Maps integration or Facebook integration to your current site all the way up to building a full custom application.

Our team has extensive experience in coding in PHP/MySQL and are comfortable with Javascript and JQuery plugins.Having tutored for over 14 years, I observed that one of the main reasons students have problems with math is because they don't believe in their natural math ability. My biggest improvement for students is not on number scores but on believing in math ability. I let students see themselves as they can actually do the math. This confidence opens up where they do better when it comes to math. We also work on developing how to express / write / draw / ML/CSS etc.
