I'm putting my 2000 2.5RS up for sale, it's time to move on to a better vehicle for auto-x. Overall it's in great condition with no subframe / chassis rust. There is a little bit of rust on the passenger side quarter panel but it's not too bad, not as bad as it can be for being a northeast car its whole life. The car has 209K on the original engine and trans, which still work extremely well, the headgaskets were done a few years ago and the timing belt and all idlers were just done about 12K miles ago. Trans as the Andrewtech cocktail and shifts excellent, even when cold. The car is perfect for backroads, autox, or a WRX swap project. I have the current mods listed below:

Engine:

- Custom cold air intake using the stock torque box w/ K&N filter
- OEM equal length manifold, the boxer rumble is overrated anyway
- Stromung catted midpipe
- Grimspeed lightweight crank pulley
- Paranoid Fabrications grounding kit

Drivetrain:

- Cusco engine mounts
- Perrin transmission mount
- TiC transmission crossmember bushings
- TiC shift linkage

- Perrin pitch stop mount
- Perrin front and rear shift bushings
- Perrin rear differential bigger bushings
- Perrin rear differential bearing innards
- Kartboy botox rear subframe bolts

- Suspension: WRX springs
- Koni sport adjustable shocks
- Whiteline comp-C front upper strut mounts

Overall it's still in good condition and to look perfect will need the small rust area taken care of. It needs nothing mechanically, and it's ready to go, just replaced an A/C o-ring and now the A/C works pretty well. Just passed PA state / emissions inspections. Asking $4,000 Firm, with the 2nd set of wheels and tires, $4,800 with the 2nd set of wheels and tires. Very firm on price, located in northern Delaware. No low-bidders, and no, $3,000 is not a reasonable offer when stock, beat automatic 2.5RSs are going for that amount. No.
