This is Pippin, my DNA sexed male dilute white-faced(peach faced) lovebird. He has a very sad story. He was found outside of a holiday gas station in Bloomington as a baby in a puddle by me. I paid well into the $1000s to keep him alive. He was very sick and needed special love and attention. It took him nearly a whole year to fully recover. He is now healthy and happy. I have other large birds and I wasn't expecting to keep him this long. I love him very much, but I'm afraid that(because he is so smart) he will get out of his cage and get hurt by one of my larger birds. He mimics some words and sayings (I love you, Pippin, kiss noises and kitty noises) but not extremely clear, as most lovebirds can't mimic. I can't give a cage with him, but I can provide a little food to start. I will ask a few questions, as I want him in a good home. I would prefer if you have experience with birds. I will also give you his DNA certificate. A rehoming fee will.
