The Amish reclaim barn wood from tobacco barns and outbuildings in the Kentucky area. Wood flooring is usually called w/ a thick top w/ which is planed off being left on the side of the board on the bottom. Both pieces is end tenned. No end matching. All of our flooring is air dried. It can fluctuates outside moisture & inside moisture. It is not dried to previous moisture after being cut.

Our beautiful reclaimed barn wood flooring will have some old worm holes, surface cracks, nail holes and knot holes that give it an old rustic appearance. It does not take away the floors durability and beauty. In fact it adds to the natural beauty of the wood. Installation ideas include laying the floor planks end-to-end and side-to-side like most conventional flooring or in an endless variety of designs. Once the floor is finely sanded and a protective floor finish is applied you will be astonished by how well it looks.

Lastly, if you prefer to build with eco-friendly materials, this beautiful reclaimed and old growth wood flooring is just another way of making use of old building materials verses cutting down more of our forests. Once installed each floor will be uniquely different from any other floor, with a durable beauty that will last for decades. You can't get that from mass produced wood flooring. . .

Our wood flooring can be ordered either smooth top or skip plane (SP) top which shows saw marks and isn't as smooth--- a more rustic look.
