Are you familiar with the latest and greatest social apps and dating sites? Do you know how to write social profiles that get results? Do you also understand the many quirks of the Midwest audience and know how to communicate with them?

Then you could be the right writer for this project?

I am an educated, active professional, but I just lost more than a decade of my life while recovering from a serious accident. My goal is to rejoin the world, build a new social life, and make up for lost time.

To meet my goal, I'll need some really great social profiles. I'd also like to do a blog of some kind, as there are probably people I would click with who won't be found on a dating or social site.

Here's a few additional details about this project.

1. I am NOT seeking generic profiles ('single dude seeks girl for blah, blah, blah' is NOT what I am looking for).
2. It isn't possible to avoid the subject of my accident or the lost time. I need to find a writer who can use those details as a strength and a selling point rather than a weakness.
3. I need to find a skilled, creative writer. I posted this before and most of the writers who responded were relatively unskilled, and few had any prior writing experience.

If you think you've got the skills and the style to pull this off, I'd enjoy hearing from.
