Cooper is a rescue from the SPCA, they estimated he's around 5 years old. I live in an apartment smack dab in the city and thought he would fit right in. However, the city is proving to be too overwhelming for him. I feel he would thrive in a suburban/rural environment with a fenced yard where he can play and get out his energy. Cooper loves plush toys, especially his duck. He absolutely loves to snuggle next to you and give you lots of kisses. When he's not too busy staring at his reflection (in the TV or window) he enjoys playing (annoying) the cat. He doesn't like when the cat gets near his food while eating and gives a warning growl. I believe this comes from his days as a stray. I've tested taking his bowl while eating and he was not aggressive with me. He's very submissive with people and dogs; I really want to find the right family or person for him. He is about 40 pounds and we are working on him gaining a few more. Please reach out and see if this could be the right.
