So I'm sick of bands having right-handed musicians. What did Jimi Hendrix, John Lennon, Lady Gaga and Bernice Witherspoon all have in common before they died? They were left handed. Mozart was not left-handed but was known for holding his baton in his left hand. And where is Rod Stewart from? England where they drive on the LEFT side. See?

Here's what I want to do. Start an all left-handed band. All musicians are welcome but you have to play primarily with your left hand. Especially useful would be a lefthanded drummer just because that would look really cool on the stage. Experience is a must but is preferential. You'll have to know how to play left handed chords, obviously.

Me? I have pro gear. I've got a Marshall stack and a Peavy guitar. Its great. It's black and is really shiny. Black is my favorite color which is another issue altogether. You must be willing to put in the hours to make it a success.

I should mention that I myself am not left-handed. But my brother was before he died so this is in his honor.

I have connections all over town, especially at Copperfields. Contact me if you're serious about joining THE LEFTOVERS (I was gonna call the band The Lefties but that seemed to.)
