Over the last 10+ years, I've applied my knowledge of Graphic Design to assist customers around the globe bring their brands and concepts to life. When I'm not serving my clientele,

I enjoy working on side projects. This helps me stay fresh at what I do and gives me different challenges to experience.

How I fell deeply in love with Graphics

I started educating myself ways to fabricate graphics in Jr. High. A couple of good friends and I were designing a PC game that we planned to share with the world. What started out as rough sketches changed into digital painting, graphic design, and then website design. At that point, I was teaching myself everything I could. Frequently Asked Questions

Do you offer rush projects?

I do - Depending on my workload, and if you're willing to pay a small rush fee for the work.

What is the ideal way to ask about a project?

Email works best and is preferred. It's speedy, efficient, and I like having a written record of our conversation. If you would like to contact me through phone, that's fine as well.

How do you create your work?

Similar to most graphic designers, I prefer Adobe Creative Cloud (Illustrator & Photoshop).

Do you commute to meetings?

Sadly, I'm not able to commute to your area for work or meetings. Being a freelance graphic designer, my client base isn't confined to regional projects. I've a tough itinerary I must follow to meet deadlines.

Did you attend school for graphic design?

Most my graphic design skills are self-taught, through many years of practice and experience.

What is Vector?

You may be wondering, "what the heck is vector?" When I design any logos or printing material for my clients, I design them using vector editing software. These vector files can be stretched to any size and will always be of highest quality. They will not become pixelated or blurry once you expand them.

What makes my services special?

You can find many thousands of graphic designers on the market and a lot of them are pretty good at their work. The real difference between these designers and myself? My style is distinct, and my portfolio speaks for itself. If you like my work and the quality I provide, then I am the designer for you. Thank you for taking a few minutes out of your busy day to check out my ad, and I look forward to hearing from.
