Let me start off by saying this car is not in perfect condition. I can only assume because you are looking at a 2002 vehicle, you should know that already. However, this car is in fantastic condition for a Model year 2002. This car spent every year except for 2014 & 2015 in North Carolina near Charlotte, in case you didn't know, that means it was inspected for emissions and functionality every year. This also means that the car is essentially rust free only having seen one winter in Michigan. You will notice this Protege5 does not have the same rear quarter panel rust that most Michigan cars do.

The interior of this car is an 8.5/10, it is in really good shape. The exterior of the car could use some work though. A few dings (you don't get to almost 190K without a few dings) and the clear coat is peeling in a few spots.

I made a bunch of modifications to the car. Not for power, but for handling. This wagon handles ridiculously well for a front wheel drive car (you have to drive it to appreciate it). For any real car guys/gals out there, the majority of the modifications were made to reduce understeer, and actually create a slight oversteer. However, I did it without sacrificing ride quality. It is stiffer than stock, but it is not harsh.

With the light weight flywheel, short shift kit, and motor mounts the drivetrain is super responsive and this car is extremely engaging to drive.

I regularly get between 29 and 32 mpg
