Does your band want to start booking shows and getting serious, but have nothing but low-quality iPhone recordings on your website? We all know how expensive studio time can be, even in low-end studios. And the whole process usually takes weeks if not months (if not years). What you might need is an At-Home Demo. You already have a place where you rehearse, so why go to a studio that sounds and feels nothing like the room that you're most comfortable in? A well-recorded demo can really capture the raw essence of a band's sound, which is incredibly important (especially to promoters and booking agents). Many bands these days are so heavily focused on their production value that the spark which inspired the music in the first place is often lost in the studio.

Here's how it works: First we'll set up a quick preliminary meeting to discuss your project and for me to hear your band in the space a little bit. Then I will bring my portable professional recording setup to your space and hit record. No micro-managing, no doing the same part over and over again, NO PRESSURE. It creates a really laid-back atmosphere that makes all the difference in the world when it comes to your band's performance of the songs. Once we've got all the songs down that you would like to do, I take the tracks home and mix and master them to your satisfaction.

You provide the instruments, space, and music, I provide all the recording equipment, microphones, engineering, mixing, and mastering at a per-project flat fee. Record in as little as one day. Have the fully mastered demo ready for release by the end of the week or by your next show.
