An effective nonprofit organization has many tools to use to develop and sustain funding for their valued programs and services. Grant writing is an element that's used to help you secure grant awards and is often confusing (and sometimes maddening). I will accompany your organization through each phase of the grants and proposal processes from funding research to the submission of your planned project(s). The strongest narratives are built upon a base of clear lines of communication, diligent research and "you". If your organization isn't at the stage in its development to create and work with grants, your efforts will fail. The first step: asking for help. Then, the fun!
