Hi there Anchorage community I am searching high and low for a certain person who wants and desires to be a part of something huge. I have a digital marketing agency that I operate from the comfort of my home and everything is ready to go and to take on clients. One thing is missing and might be you! You see I am a big picture kind of guy who is passionate about painting a picture of all that is possible for a small to medium sized business in terms of growth via the internet but when it comes down to the nuts and bolts of making that happen I tend to be a little weak in that department. I am looking for a possible partner who has time during the day who would enjoy coming along for the ride as we put together a plan for gaining new business and then implement it as soon as possible. One guy who went through the training I did to become a licensed marketing consultant is already making 50 thousand dollars per month working from home probably no more than 30 hours per week. That's what is possible with this business model. I'd be happy and content with 5 thousand a month but together we could do a whole lot more! I will be upfront here I am a devout Christian and minister and therefore I base all I do on the bible and would only consider you if you are okay with that. I will state once more as well that I am not necessarily looking for an actual partnership to begin with but if we are good fit and I can see the potential I may consider it. I am wanting someone who loves to work and has a can do attitude preferably someone who is tech savvy and is good at figuring things out without getting overwhelmed and frustrated like myself. If this sounds like it could possibly be something you see yourself doing then please give me a call. I will only discuss the details over the phone so don't expect a response if you don't call me at

I look forward to connecting with the right people, take care and God!
